The Molokai Expedition.

Since my last the members of this much isolated fraternity have had the pleasure of continued good weather, which fact the proverbial oldest inhabitant states may be regarded as phenomenal. By good weather is meant absence of the deluging rains which by all accounts are generally prevalent in this, at present happy, valley of Waikolu, at this particular season of the year. The wind has been very strong, at times, and the early morning air which is, perforce, indulged in by all in the camp is rather cool, even if bracing, the average thermometer showing, at 6 a. m., 62 degrees.

Work on the particular business which Superintendent Wilson is here on is progressing rapidly, over 200 feet of roadway having been already reclaimed from the wilds of this almost trackless waste and placed in a condition to receive the pipes which are intended to supply the settlements of Kalawao and Kalanapapa with that much craved blessing—water. The obstacles which presented themselves at the commencement of the labor, rugged and dangerous pathways, poor landing place, etc., have been removed, gradually, and the prospects point to rapid work.

This valley is well fitted with the natural accompaniments to impress the lover of handiwork of the Grand Master with that feeling of awe and reverence which is concomitant with a proper and satisfactory enjoyment of the stupendously grand in Nature. The frowning precipices which overhang the only pathway to this secluded vale, threaten the timorous with dread of fall of rock from heights above, or else the roar of angry surf, that in bad weather beats in constant foam against the base, causes the boldest to beware their path. Passing this point the valley opens out until confined on the western side by a chain of rugged precipices, cloud-capped and whose scarred and gullied sides are pathless; the home only of the owl, pheasant, wild duck or boatswain bird. Like the west the eastern side is guarded by these verdure clad sentinels of nature, their summits reaching between 4,000 and 5,000 feet above sea level. But words fail, call and see it or else get Jim Williams to take a photo for you!

Superintendent Wilson went after a troublesome bear on Sunday last, which was reported to be safely and comfortably housed in the confines of the brush near this camp. Although himself and party saw plenty of fresh trail, they failed to obtain the desired interview with the old inhabitant. One of the boys, at least, was thankful. Pigs are plentiful in this valley, but they are very shy; pheasants are plentiful also; ducks are scarce.

While the "gaffer," as one of the "boys" calls the Superintendent, was on his expedition, two others of the party, Messrs J. H. Black and Frank Godfrey, had been detailed for special service in an attempt to reach the fountain head of the clear rippling river. These two worthies left the camp at 9:30 a. m. in the best of spirits, and report that their progress was fairly rapid for the first few miles. Then recourse had to be had to the rocks of the river as a path, jumping being the order of progress rather than walking. Boulders big enough to block the entrance to the Government House had to be crawled over, ponds, waist-deep, of ice-cold water had to be waded through, the perpendicular falls, 4,000 feet high, preventing passage upward on either side, until finally, after much toil, tribulation and vexation of spirit, the wished-for point, the head of the Waikolu valley, a spot probably never trodden by foot of foreigner before, was reached. The tired travelers slaked their thirst, and Godfrey plunged into the circular basin, swam across under the fall, and indulged in a shower-bath. Arrival was made there at 2 p. m.; departure again at 2:30, and camp was reached about 6:30 p. m. Black in good walking condition, Godfrey pretty weary and broken up. There is but little doubt that they are the only foreigners ever at the source of the Waikolu river, and the feat and fact are well worthy of record.

The Mokoli arrived here on the afternoon of the 28th inst., and all hands were pleased to see Captain McGregor's burly form breasting the narrow pathway from the beach. The vessel brought some stores and pipe, and the work of discharging was completed on the morning of the 29th. She left here about 9:30 o'clock and at about noon her place was taken by the steamer Kilaua Hou which arrived from Kalanapapa with more pipe for this station. While the cargo of the Kilaua was being discharged the ever vigilant lookout reported another steamer coming to port and, after a little waiting, she was discovered to be the Mokoli returning again, this time from Kalanapapa with more pipe on board. The presence of two steamers at once in this harbor of Waikolu must have been a surprise to the most aged shellfish on the rocks and from the crowd that appeared to take in the sight from Kalawao must have been a cause for wonderment. Both vessels sailed at 5:30 p. m. for Lanai and Maui.

Rules and regulations have been published by Superintendent Wilson for the discipline of the camp and if obtainable a copy will be forwarded for the delectation of GAZETTE readers. They are well worthy of perusal and the way they are enforced strikes terror into the hearts of evil-doers.

Hilo Social and Other Notes.

Arrived at Hilo, February 28th, brigantine Lurline, Captain William Mason, from San Francisco. Passage, twelve days. Is quarantined for six days.

Mauna Kea and Mauna Loa are snow-capped. Mauna Loa has more snow than it has had in many years.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union entertainment was held at Haili Church on Sunday evening, February 28th. The Hilo Home for the aged, 200.

were out in good number and under the leadership of Hon. H. S. Townsend sang some choice selections magnificently, as usual. Mrs. H. C. Austin sang a choice solo. Her voice is pure and melodious, and seldom fails to charm an audience. There were addresses by Rev. J. Q. Adams of San Francisco and Mr. J. Nawahl. Hon. H. S. Townsend sang Himmel's Battle Prayer, showing to fine advantage his rich baritone voice.

There was an extra large number of persons assembled at the house of Hon. D. H. Hitchcock on the occasion of the sociable of the First Foreign Church, Hilo, on 24th Feb. The spacious veranda had been enclosed by a variety of flags and seats provided so that the majority of people were seated outside. The parlor was redolent with flowers. As usual the entertainment was choice. There was a solo and chorus, solo by Mr. C. N. Arnold. Two side-splitting recitations by the one in town who is noted for her elocutionary powers, Mrs. J. A. Beckwith. She recited Bro. Watkins and the First Speech of a School-boy, to the great delight of all. Mrs. Doctor Thompson, who also has a great gift for fine reciting, will soon leave Hilo to join her husband in California. She will be missed. Mr. A. J. Boehmer sang a solo; Mrs. H. C. Austin, whose choice selections all are pleased to listen to, sang a solo, giving great pleasure. Rev. J. Q. Adams and wife of San Francisco and Dr. McGregor of London were the out town visitors. Ice cream, soda water, and a great variety of cakes, were served. The entertainment closed by singing Auld Lang Syne, C. C. Kennedy singing the solo, the audience joining in the chorus.

School Benefit at Kohala.

The white residents of Kohala turned out in good force on Friday night, February 24th, to an entertainment given by the foreign school at the hall in Kaiopihi, for the purpose of raising funds to enlarge the school-house. The rest of the hall was very well filled with other nationalities, and it is said that the net result of the entertainment was all of $80.

Repetitions of these performances are planned, and it is hoped that there will be a creditable school-house to show for it in the end. It may be a mooted question, by and by, whether to tear down the old and build anew, or merely add to the old, which has already been once enlarged.

The audience showed its appreciation of good music and a good voice by determinedly bringing Mr. Ross to the front a second time, and the quartet was also encored.

The Makapala school-house, that was blown off its foundation by the late kona gale, has been restored to its former position, which is a little over thirteen miles from Mahukona, and is therefore not regarded by the residents as being very "near" to the last-named locality.

The principal of the school and his amiable help-meet, who occupy a cosy cottage just outside the grounds, are a very pleasant acquisition to Kohala society.

Kohala, March.

Tragedy at Waimea.

Information was brought to the GAZETTE office by a passenger who joined the Kinau, Friday morning, at Kawaihae, of a sad and fatal accident that took place at Waimea on the previous evening. It appears that two boys, Lanakila, seventeen to eighteen years of age, and a younger brother were handling a gun on the door steps of their father's house, while a boy of the name of Kahoine, son of Iki, a neighbor, was standing at the bottom of the steps. By some mishap, the gun went off and Kahoine was shot through the heart, expiring instantly. The event, as might be expected, produced a terrible sensation in the neighborhood. When our informant left, the people were waiting for the coroner, Dr. Bond, who was to hold an inquest.

Accident at Kailua.

A correspondent writes as follows from Kealahou, Hawaii, March 1st: An accident occurred at Kailua, Hawaii, on February 27th. Mr. Clark was kicked by a horse, and had his leg broken. There is no medical man in either North or South Kona, and had it not been that a man-of-war was then at Kailua and the doctor of that vessel kindly attended to the fracture, the consequences might have been serious.

Several young people have died from fever during the last month. Surely the tax-payers of Kona ought to have a physician that, in case of an accident or sickness, we can look to for advice and help.

Casualty at Knau.

A correspondent writing from Knau, Maui, March 3d, sends the following account of a lively time caused by a schooner there:

The schooner Waioli broke from her moorings at 3 a. m. and came aground, then fouling the landing she smashed the outer forty feet of it into match-wood. The schooner lost her shoe and her rudder is gone. Her sugar—she having been full loaded—will be discharged into the schooner Canute, to sail probably to-night or Sunday morning. The Waioli will probably have to be towed to Honolulu. Crew all safe. Total damage is estimated at $600 or $700.

OUR SAN FRANCISCO LETTER.

Per Steamship Belgic, February 23, 1888.

[Special Correspondence of the Gazette.]

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 23, 1888.

The main topic of conversation in San Francisco, since my last letter, has been the exposure of an Opium Ring by the Examiner. The paper charges that enormous quantities of the drug have been smuggled into port, chiefly by the Halcyn, which was formerly a pleasure yacht, and that the parties directly implicated are ex-Assessor Louis F. Holtz, ex-Sheriff Patrick Connelly and Inspector Fogarty, of the Customs Department. Specific charges have been made against the trio, and Mr. Connelly has brought suit against the Examiner for libel, claiming damages at $100,000. The other two have made, so far, no response. Collector Hager states that he had heard of the reports against Mr. Fogarty six months ago, had inquired into them, and had engaged detectives to watch the Inspector, but without obtaining any proof of the accusations. The Examiner has just succeeded in convicting "Doctor" Josselyn and two accomplices of conspiracy to murder, by "thug" tactics, for the purpose of obtaining insurance money for the murdered man. The new accusations regarding the opium ring will also probably give the paper another chance to bring law-breakers to justice. It is reported also that the same paper will publish a Washington and a New York issue very shortly, containing the same news as appears in the San Francisco edition.

The Postmaster-General has just completed a contract with the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad for quicker mail dispatch. A further shortening of time between New York and Chicago is being arranged, so that the through time from New York to San Francisco will soon be but little over 100 hours.

The resolutions passed by the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce, relative to the duties on sugar, were introduced in the House by Representative Morrow. The Chronicle, Examiner, News-Letter and Post have condemned the action of the Chamber in this connection.

The S. S. Alameda did not arrive till 10 a. m. on Sunday, 19th of February. A special train left Oakland at 12:30 p. m. with her English mails and overtook the regular 8:30 a. m. train at Blue Canyon, having traveled 230 miles in five hours. The first 100 miles were covered in three hours, and, at times, the speed of the special exceeded 64 miles an hour. The connection with the regular fast overland train was made at 5:30 p. m. and the mail should reach New York in time for the Servia, leaving there on Saturday morning, February 25th, thus saving a delay of three days in transit to England.

A bill has been introduced in the House, by Representative Morrow, to appropriate $60,000 to pay the Oceanic Company for carrying American mails to and from the Colonies for the three years of their contract. Postmaster-General Vilas promised to contribute $4,000 per annum toward the cost of the service, this amount to be paid to the Colonies in addition to the postage earned by the company. Finding he had no authority to make any such payment, he has, however, kept his promise to the Colonies at the expense of the company, which has not been paid for carrying the United States mails during any portion of the three years.

Captain Rust, of the Lady Louise, whose sudden illness was noted in a former letter, has since died. "Count" Smith, the well known clerk of the Palace Hotel, has also died after a long and painful illness.

Not a single case of small-pox was reported yesterday in San Francisco, which indicates a clearing up of the disease.

Claus Spreckels, accompanied by his son A. B. Spreckels, will leave for New York on Monday, February 27th. The object of their visit is to complete arrangements for the establishment of sugar refineries in New York, Baltimore, Philadelphia, and other Eastern points. It is stated that both Californian and Eastern capital are with Mr. Spreckels in his enterprise and that no efforts will be left untaken to overthrow the sugar trust. The movement is very popular in the East.

Mr. P. C. Jones has been interviewed since his arrival. He speaks very favorably of this year's sugar crop, but is very reticent as to the operations of the American Refinery and their possible connection with the Sugar Trust.

The Senate Committee is continuing its enquiries at New York, into the operations of the Trust. The members of the committee are Senators Frank B. Arnold (Chairman), Eugene E. F. O'Connor, H. J. Coggeshall, John L. Lincoln, Eugene S. Ives, Geo. F. Langburn and E. C. Walker. Henry O. Havemeyer, the first witness, was examined at length. At times he grew rather confused and said more than he intended to, while again he declined to answer. His attorney, Parsons, refused to produce the agreement of the Trust, and the Senate will probably take action to compel him to do so or to place him in confinement. Other witnesses examined were H. Moller of the North River Sugar Refinery and Editor Burgett of the American Grocer who testified as to the effect of the trust on sugar values.

Small-pox on the Wm. G. Irwin.

About half an hour after the brigantine Wm. G. Irwin hauled up to the wharf last Tuesday to discharge her cargo, one of her crew who had been laid up some days with a bad leg was reported to be breaking out with spots, suggesting the presence of small-pox. The vessel was forthwith moved out into the stream. The sick man was removed to the quarantine station and also the native laborers who had been engaged in unloading the vessel. The natives demurred energetically against being taken to the quarantine premises, but after a solemn exhortation from Mr. Harry Von Hoyt, finally submitted with good grace to what they at first thought an imposition. These men were not detained any longer than necessary to put them through a disinfecting process and to have their clothes fumigated, after which they were released. The two passengers and the crew of the Wm. G. Irwin have been placed on board the Kaimiloa, whence the passengers will be taken to the quarantine station this morning.

The "case" above referred to was pronounced later in the day to be small-pox of a mild character.

The vessel will be unloaded and loaded by the wharf men, when her own crew will be returned on board. Ship and crew will then depart in peace and good order on the return
